C. Srikanth (Electrical Engineer, P&D Dept) chanced upon an ancient two-wheeler lying in a heap of scrap, and started thinking – how could he give the dead machine a new lease of life and also contribute to a cleaner environment?
The answer, in two words, was an Electric Moped.
The Electrical Engineer rescued the heap of rusty metal from the scrapyard, milled up his sleeves, and got to work – and soon, the scrap had turned, Cinderella-like, into a gleaming machine ready to take on the roads. At a fraction of the cost of a brand new electric moped.
Srikanth gifted the moped to his wife, who uses it for short trips these days. It has a fabulous mileage of 40 kms per single charge and helps in these days of rising fuel prices.
#CleanIndiaMission also keeps households happy. 😊
