'Telecom ecosystem calls for inclusive approach'

India must consider engaging in technology transfer, says Sandeep Aggarwal

SRONENDRA SINGH
New Delhi, July 16
India must follow an inclusive and strategic approach to protect its telecom ecosystem, without compromising on the growth of markets, or the enthusiasm for flagship schemes which can give impetus to private investments, Telecom Equipment and Services Export Promotion Council (TEPC) has said.

"To this end, India can do well by obtaining technology transfer from friendly countries instead of going for research and development work. Further, the government needs to incentivise the domestic telecom industry by giving various benefits like PLI, Make-in-India and tax benefits, so that Indian industries can compete with Chinese," Sandeep Aggarwal, Chairman TEPC, told BusinessLine.

Telecom exports
Aggarwal recently took over as the Chairman TEPC, set up by the government to promote and develop export of telecom equipment and services. TEPC plays a critical role in furtherance of telecom export from India and assists Indian member companies in easy facilitation of their respective exports.

Its members include Bharti Airtel, BSNL, MTNL, Ericsson India, Nokia Solutions India, Foxconn India, Lava Mobiles and Nokia India. On the latest Production Linked Incentive (PLI) Scheme for telecom and networking products, which was approved by the Cabinet with an outlay of ₹12,195 crore, Aggarwal said the industry feels that the government should ensure reservation for procurement of 'Made In India' products for domestic consumption.

"We have also requested the government to include specialised service sectors like submarine cable laying and maintenance under the PLI. We have also demanded extension of tax benefits for telecom industries covered by PLI scheme," he said.

Towards self-reliance

Through this policy, India will move towards self-reliance and by incentivising large-scale manufacturing in India, domestic value addition will increase gradually. Provision of higher incentive to micro, small and medium enterprises will encourage domestic telecom manufacturers to become part of the global supply chain, he said.

Talking about BharatNet project, wherein the PM had made an announcement to connect six-lakh villages in 1,000 days on August 15 last year, Aggarwal said that to make this a success the government should ensure that free right-of-way for laying the cable is provided.

"Wherever possible, a separate dedicated corridor should be earmarked for the BharatNet. Domestic companies need to produce the optical fibre cables and the related telecom equipment to decrease dependency on imports. The government should implement it on turnkey basis and maintenance agencies need to be finalised in advance for faster execution of the project. The core transmission network also needs to be upgraded," he added.

The Cabinet on July 1 had approved public-private partnership mode for the rollout of BharatNet project in 16 States with viability gap funding of ₹19,041 crore.

Laid low by pandemic, carpooling start-ups 'Ride' on allied services

With enterprise commute services as key, offer e-comm, job search and socialising apps

DEBANGANA GHOSH
Mumbai, July 16

With over 80 per cent of their businesses wiped off since the pandemic hit, popular carpooling start-ups like SRide and Quick Ride have found greener pastures in allied services.

Having formed a community of working professionals who were travelling together daily for the past few years, these start-ups are now leveraging the network to offer e-commerce, job search, community socialising apps and end-to-end enterprise commute services.

Commute service

Enterprise commute services have been a core offering for both Quick Ride and SRide. These start-ups partner with major technology companies and IT parks in the metro cities, creating a network of ride-givers and ride-takers. A key differentiation has been ensuring affordability over Uber and Ola carpools and, in some cases, public transport commutes.

Quick Ride

Quick Ride's business fell by 80% when the lockdown started. Although, contracts with clients including IBM, Infosys, and Amazon to name a few, continue to be valid, the start-up doesn't want to rely on the hybrid work model of IT companies and are exploring other ways until things normalise.

Going a step ahead, Quick Ride will be soon intro-cing an end-to-end enterprise commute offering to its clients, which will include offering taxi and cab services too.

SRide, on the other hand, continues to strongly believe in the recovery of the carpool business. Co-Founder Lakshna Jha said that despite the business falling nearly 95% when the pandemic started, currently SRide is witnessing a slow but steady recovery at 20-25%.

Pivoting

When business was down Jha started SNeighbour to bring her user base together in the time of need. "During the second wave of Covid-19, people were facing problems with buying medicines, groceries and even finding vaccines, beds and injections; we decided to bring them together. Post-pandemic, we plan to continue the feature, which will help like-minded people in the community get information on any requirement; be it jobs, needing professional help, finding mentors, connecting with people based on their skills and interests," Jha said.

Backed by venture capital firms like Nexus Ventures (now Prosus), Sequoia Capital and Venture Highway, Quick Ride, which has over 4 million users, made a similar move with a new jobs feature and a section called Bazaar.

Lavti said, "We saw an opportunity in outstation travelling when people were trying to go back home during the lockdown. We have launched two more services, jobs and a section called Bazaar. Bazaar is a peer-to-peer buying and selling platform. You can share anything; from looking for house rentals, to selling furniture."

Different take

When business was down Jha started SNeighbour to bring her user base together in the time of need. "During the second wave of Covid-19, people were facing problems with buying medicines, groceries and even finding vaccines, beds and injections; we decided to bring them together. Post-pandemic, we plan to continue the feature, which will help like-minded people in the community get information on any requirement; be it jobs, needing professional help, finding mentors, connecting with people based on their skills and interests," Jha said.

Amazon to ramp up presence in the North-East

Apart from enlisting SMBs, e-tailer to showcase handicrafts, GI-tagged products

ABHISHEK LAW
Kolkata, July 16

The Indian arm of US e-commerce giant Amazon is looking to ramp up presence in the seven North-Eastern States along with Sikkim.

Apart from on-boarding new sellers, primarily small and medium businesses (SMBs) that include artisans, weavers and women entrepreneurs from the region; the e-tailer will tap into handicrafts, GI-enabled offerings and local spices targeting India and global markets.

Items such as Chaksheshan shawls from Nagaland, muga silk from Assam, different types of weaves like the Moirang Phee from Manipur and varieties of teas and spices like the Mizo Chilli, amongst others are some of the unique items that the e-tailer looks to list. Most of these items are GI-protected.

Focus on the less focussed
According to Pranav Bhasin, Director, MSME & Selling Partner Experience at Amazon India, the company will look to enlist 50,000 SMBs from the North-East by 2025. The e-tailer already has

Pranav Bhasin, Director, MSME & Selling Partner Experience, Amazon India

6,000-odd sellers who list and sell on its marketplace from the region; while the company delivers to "all serviceable pin-codes" of the region. A new programme called "Spotlight North East" has been launched with a special storefront by Amazon India. Spotlight North-East will run parallel to existing seller programmes such as Karigar, Saheli, Amazon Launchpad and Local Shops on Amazon.

Bhasin adds, with additional focus on the North-East, commodities specific to the region such as tea, spices and honey, are expected to get a boost in international markets.

The project will support the local economy and also help local artisans and women entrepreneurs "embrace digitalisation". "One out of two households in the North-East are dependent on income from handicrafts and handlooms. We will look to onboard 50,000 small businesses including artisans, woman entrepreneurs and local shops by 2025 with 5,000-plus local craft-based products being listed for sale in India and overseas," he told BusinessLine.

Unique demand

According to Bhasin, Amazon Global Selling is an option that is extended to all sellers who list offerings on its marketplace. Through this, traditional handmade and handloom offerings from India already have global takers including the Indian diaspora.

Veeda Clinical Research acquires 50.1 per cent stake in Bioneed

OUR BUREAU
Ahmedabad, July 16

Veeda Clinical Research Limited, on Friday informed that it has acquired a controlling 50.1 per cent stake in Bengaluru-based Bioneed India Private Limited, after acquiring a significant minority stake earlier in March.

The company did not disclose the quantum of investment it made for the acquisition of the controlling stake in Bioneed.

Earlier in June this year, Veeda had also received an equity investment of $16 million led by private equity fund, Sabre Partners and from high-net-worth individuals Pranabh Mody, of JB Chemicals, Havells family office, Nikhil Vora, founder of Sixth Sense Ventures, Arjun Bhartiya of Jubilant among others.

Growing R&D budgets of global pharmaceutical companies is the opportunity that Veeda and Bioneed expect to capitalise on, a statement said.

Ajay Tandon, Managing Director, Veeda said, "We believe we have made progress over the last three months in leveraging capabilities across Veeda, Ingenuity and Bioneed for integrated solutions to our clients. We are working towards further aligning our capabilities, systems, processes and people to capitalise the full potential of our combination."

Commenting on the development, Vinaya Babu, Founder and Managing Director of Bioneed said, "We believe that what we are seeing, represents significant traction in our preclinical, biopharma and drug development services, where we continue to invest in to enhance capabilities. We are very excited by the prospects ahead."
